Kelly launches a European Life Sciences practice

The company intends to become a European leader in recruitment and outsourcing in the Science sector

Kelly, a world leader in human resources and outsourcing solutions, today announces the launch of a European-wide life sciences practice. This new practice is part of the company's strategy to become a prominent player in a market where top talent is in high demand.

Kelly EMEA Life Sciences Practice operates in every European country, expanding well beyond the 15 countries in which the company has offices. This practice is headed by Franck Teboul, Kelly's General Manager in France and Benelux and Practice Leader Life Sciences EMEA.

For more than 20 years, Kelly has been recognized in France for its work in the life sciences sector and its unique range of services, which goes from clinical research consulting to temporary workers to recruitment and outsourcing (BPO and RPO). Kelly is one of the world's leading firms in the life sciences industry, including Europe. Worldwide, the company works with 89% of all pharmaceutical, biotech and medical equipment companies of Fortune 500.

Today, Kelly places more than 30,000 employees yearly in life sciences industries across EMEA region through 300 Kelly consultants, 70% of which hold a life sciences degree. In Europe, Kelly has 250,000 life sciences candidates registered in its database and works with 16 of the biggest biotechnology firms. In 2015, Kelly achieved revenues of €350m in life sciences in the EMEA zone, €80m (22%) of which were from France alone.

Kelly's new EMEA Life Sciences Practice will help the firm strengthen its recruiting and outsourcing business throughout Europe by expanding its range of services to all sectors in this industry in all European countries, while simultaneously offering better opportunities and education to candidates.

In addition to significantly expanding its customer portfolio, Kelly intends to strengthen the interaction among its experts community. "Kelly is developing a life sciences ecosystem to smooth the discussion between various stakeholders, multiply opportunities for candidates, and set up connections between the best universities and industry leaders," Franck Teboul said. "With our economy in constant change, Kelly will provide flexibility and much-needed resources to life sciences industries through its human-resources solutions and its experts community."
